LAWS FORBIDDING THE DESTRUCTION OF TIMBER IN EUROPE.

Governments Have Supervision Over Private as Well as National and Communal Forests-Reforesting Carried on by Established Departments.

In Germany the various governments own and manage, in a conservative o'clock everybod spirit, about one-third of the forest area, and they also control the manage- chips ment of another sixth, which belongs to villages, cities and public institutions, in so far as these communities are obliged to employ expert foresters and must submit their working plans to the government for approval, thus preventing improvident and wasteful methods. The other half of the forest property, in the hands of private owners, is managed mostly without interference, although upon methods similar to those employed by the government, and by trained foresters, who receive their education in one of the eight higher and several lower schools of forestry which the various governments have established.

The several states differ in their laws regarding forest property. Of the private forests 70 per cent are without any control whatever, while 30 per cent are subject to supervision, so far as clearing and devastation are concerned. The tendency on the part of the government has been rather toward persuasive measures. Thus in addition to buying up or acquiring by exchange and reforesting waste lands-some 300,000 acres have been so reforested during the last 25 years—the government gives assistance to private owners in reforesting their waste land. During the last 10 years $300,000 was granted in this way.

In Austria, by a law adopted in 1852, not only are the state forests-comprising less than 30 per cent of the total forest area-rationally managed, and the management of the communal forests nearly 40 per cent-officially supervised, but private owners-holding about 32 per cent-are prevented from devastating their forest property to the detriment of adjoiners. CAIRO DERVISHES

THEIR HOWLING AND WHIRLING ON THE BANKS OF THE NILE.

A Performance of Which Much Has Been Written Described by an Eyewitness-An Entertainment Which Put the Bosto Chaplain to Thinking Cairo has an entertainment every Friday afternoon which draws well. It is the function of the howling and whirling dervishes in the mosque of Kasr-el-Ain, on the road to old Cairo, near the bank of the Nile. There were formerly two entertainments, one of the howlers, the other of the whirlers. I do not know how they happened to be united. I sup-pose it came from the tendency toward consolidation and combination so prevalent in these times. It is much more convenient now. In the former times tourists were obliged to hurry from one to the other, as they both came off at the same hour. Now they can go leisure. ly after an early lunch. We assembled with 100 or 200 of our fellow travelers at the appointed hour, or rather some time before, in order to secure good

The performance is given in a circular room crowned by a lofty dome. Chairs are supplied for a moderate stipend. On the occasion when we assisted there were about 30 performers. The leader of the troop was a very respectable looking man. He sat in the place of honor on one side of the room. The others formed a semicircle in front of him. The exercise began with a short invocation and devout obeisances. At first the dervishes kneeled on mats. The leader opened with a brief chant, and the others responded vigorously, ducking their heads to the floor. Then a benevolent looking senior member struck up a song which had something of the effect of a pig under a gate. This seem-ed to be stiumlating, for all the others rose and began a rhythmic howling, keeping time by moving their heads forward and backward, with occasional variations to the right and left.

The howling was varied by a snorting chorus, which, with practice, becomes very effective. This was followed by deep and loud breathing, the heads all the time wagging in the most vigor-ous manner. The accompanying music at first was only a flute and a small drum, but as they warmed up larger drums and cymbals were brought in, and the more violent action was accentdervishes had long hair, and the movement of their heads was sufficient to throw it forward and backward at every stroke. This was a real addition to the effect. After they got well at work one of them glided into the center of the circle and began to whirl, keeping time to the music and the howling, which kept going faster and faster.

Now and then the leader would make a signal to stop. Some of the performers seemed unable to do this promptly, but kept on swaying and howling until they were run down. Only one of them fell in a swoon, and he seemed to be in a fair way to recover when we left. This was a slight disappointment. Some days there are more events of this nature, which always increase the pleasure of the audience. I am almost inclined to fear that the "show" element has been allowed to creep into this performance, though it appears to be carried on in dead earnest. There is no fee for admission, but every visitor is expected to drop something into the "plate" as he goes out, besides paying for his chair.

The performers at first struck me as a "job lot" of loafers picked up in the street for the purpose, but I was assured by one who ought to know that they were real dervishes, well practiced in their business. Certainly no company without a good deal of practice could go through what they did without a greater list of casualities. I did not see any indication on a single face that there was anything amusing about it. As this was a religious function, the chaplain naturally took the right of the line. saw that he was intensely interested and presumed that he was looking for a deeper meaning underlying the strange spectacle. It seems that he was considering the possibility of introducing something of this nature to give warmth and color to the religious services in the churches of Boston, which are too apt to be coldly decorous, especially under the chilling influences of the Back Bay. Two carefully selected and well or ganized troops, one of whirlers and the other of howlers, would add real life and interest to any one of our churches where the members of the congregation are now apt to be sleepy. Anything in reason, the chaplain says, to get people out of their ruts of self complacency. I can scarcely venture to express an opinion here as to the spiritual effect, but I feel sure that a congregation, drowsy with overfeeding on baked beans and brown bread, would be made wide awake by joining moderately in exercises like those exhibited to us by the whirlers and howlers of Cairo.-Cor. Boston Herald.

Fried Ice Cream A Philadelphia firm makes a specialty of fried ice cream, which is pronounced delicious by all who taste it. A small, solid cake of the cream is enveloped in ped in boiling lard or butter long enough to cook the outside to a crisp. Served immediately, the ice cream is found to be as solidly frozen as when it was first prepared. The process of frying is so quickly accomplished and the pastry is so good a protector that the heat has no chance to reach the frozen cream. - New

THE PLANET URANUS.

Signatic World Would Disclose

If Uranus, which is a star of abou the sixth magnitude, were a planet like those little ones called asteroids, which are being discovered by the dozen every year, it could not have much claim upon popular attention. But Uranus is really gigantic world, more than 60 time as large as ours. Its vast distance, now about 1,700,000,000 miles from the earth, is what causes it to look so small. Uranus has four moons, which revolve backward in their orbits-that is to say, they revolve from east to west around Uranus, while Uranus goes, like all the other planets, from west to east around the sun. It is believed that Uranus rotates backward on its axis also. Moreover, the axis of that great, strange globe lies in such a direction that in the course of its year, which is equal to 84 of our years, the sun shines almost perpendicularly first upon one pole and then upon the other. Measured by our time standard, there are 40 years of constant daylight, followed by 40 years of unbroken night, around the poles of Uranus. And the sun rises in the west and sets in the east there. But the sun looks very small when viewed from Uranus—only one four-hundredth as large as it appears to us. Still it sheds upon that planet 1,500 times as much light as the full moon sends to the earth, so that daylight upon Uranus, while faint compared with the blaze of a terrestrial noonday, is nevertheless a very respectable kind of illumination. It is a pity that the telescope is able to show us very little of the detail of the surface of Uranus. Some faint bands or belts, just visible with the most powerful instruments, are all that can be made out. If we could visit Uranus, we should probably be greatly surprised, if not greatly disappointed. Its average density is but a trifle in excess of that of water, and of course its surface density is far less. A voyager from the earth landing of Uranus would probably sink almost as rapidly as if he had leaped upon one of those round white thunderclouds which, piled high in air, look so solid and snowy cool on a July afternoon. He could no more walk on the surface of that world than he could walk on water. It has generally been assumed that the meaning of the slight density of Uranus is that that planet is still in a vaporous or liquid condition and exceedingly hot perhaps. If so, it may in the course of future ages contract and condition resembling the earth's. Will vital forces then become active upon it and produce a long succession of livingspecies, brightening its dim daylight with the color of flowers and the cease less activity of animate existence? It is not likely that man will ever be able to answer that question, but who that looks upon Uranus keeping step with the earth to the music of the sun car help asking it?-Garrett P. Serviss in New York Sun.

Jangling Plane Strings.

Another case occurred in a house where I was once stopping in Nova Scotia. A piano with a bad note was fixed by simply opening an inside shutter of a bay window at the opposite side of a parlor from the piano. The latch of one shutter was lightly resting against the edge of another and caused the jangle when one particular note was struck. The lady player had previously declared that she would send for a tnner the next day and laughed at my attempt to fix it by hunting about the room while she pounded. However, she did not conceal her surprise when the trouble was removed and admitted that there was something about this sound business that she did not quite understand. In regard to locating these jangles, however, I will say that it is not always so easy. It requires some practice before the ear becomes capable of locating with any degree of success the direction of sounds of this kind. This was my experience with the first piano jangle, that of the cracked globe, which was quite difficult. That of the window hutter was easier as well as many others which I have located since. A correct musical ear is also an important adjunct in the case.—A. A. Knudson in Popular Science Monthly.

Birch Bark Shoes.

Shoes and other articles besides bas kets and cabinets are manufactured from birch bark by the Russian peasantry. The bark from which these articles are made is from the inner skin of the Russian birch tree, common in almost all parts of the empire. It is gathered spring and fall, and the process is a very simple one. An incision is first made around the trunk of the tree, and the peasants have a knack of tearing or unwinding the bark from the starting point, which gives them a strip of even width that they wind into a ball and keep through the winter until it is dry enough to use. It is then made into shoes, baskets and other useful articles. The barks shoes are universally worn by the Russian peasantry. Other shoes used in winter are made of sheeps' wool. These are manufactured by itinerant cobblers who travel from house to house, using the peasants' own materials. Philadelphia Ledger.

BISHOP POLK'S QUICK WIT.

Some Interesting Things a Voyage to the When I aside the Federal incs.

Bishop Polk of Louisians who served so zealously in the Conf terate army, had one adventure at the battle of Per-ryville which is best told in his own words. He says:

About dark, shortly after the arrival of Liddell's brigade, I observed a body of men whom I believed to be Confederates standing at an angle to this brigade and firing obliquely at the newly arrived troops.

"Dear me," said I, "this is very sad. It must be stopped." So I turned round. but could find none of my young men, who were about on various messages. I determined to ride up myself and settle the matter. I cantered up to the colone of the regiment, asked him in angry tones what he meant by shooting at his friends and desired him to cease doing so at once.

"I don't think there can be any mis take about it," he said, with some surprise. "I am sure they are the enemy. "Enemy!" I said, "Why, I have only just left them myself. Cease firing, sir What is your name, sir?" "My name is Colonel - of th

-, and pray, sir, who are von?" Then, for the first time, I saw to my stonishment that he was a Federal, and that I was in the rear of the Federal lines. I knew there was no hope but in brazening it out, my dark blouse and the increasing obscurity befriending me, so approached quite close to him, shook my fist in his face and said: "I'll soon show you who I am. Cease firing at once!" I then turned my horse and cantered slowly down the line, shouting in an authoritative manner to the Federals to cease firing.

At the same time I experienced a disagreeable sensation like screwing up my back and calculating how many bullets could lie between my shoulders. I was afraid to increase my pace till 2 got to a small copse, and then I put the spurs in and galloped back to my men. I rode up to the nearest officer and said to him. "Colonel, I have reconnoitered those fellows pretty closely, and there is no mistake about their being Federals!"-Youth's Companion.

Religious Foot Washing In Paris. The church, being fond of striking contrasts, put forth all her pomp while the archbishop was going through the humiliations of the ceremonial. Strictly speaking, there is no foot washin The 12 indigent old men had their feet washed before they came to the cathe-

When seated there in a row, stock ingless, but with slippers resembling those worn by seabathers at Trouville the archbishop approaches them, attended by his vicars general. One of these ecclesiastics bears a golden ewer, with a narrow neok, in which is scented water, and the other a basin and napkins of fine damask linen. A footstool is before each old man. The basin is set on it by the archbishop. This done, the person whose feet are to be washed withdraws them from the canvas slippers and holds them over the basin. His grace then pours a few drops of water over each foot. This done, a towel is handed to him, and he wipes the water away.

As there are 12 persons to be attended to, this office, which is taken to symbolize Christian charity and humility, is repeated as many times. A grand procession, followed by an anthem, ends the service. - Paris Correspondent London

Ash Wednesday is so called from the parious custom of strewing ashes on the head as a sign of penitence. It was probably instituted by Gregory the Great, who was pope from 590 to 604. Originally the ashes were consecrated on the altar before mass, sprinkled with holy water and signed three times with the cross. During this ceremony the priest recited these words, "Memento quod cinis es et in cinerem reverteris." (Remember that thou art dust and must return to dust.) The ashes thus consecrated were then strewn on the heads of the officiating priests and the assembled people.

The ashes were usually obtained by burning the palms consecrated on the preceding (Palm) Sunday.—St. Louis
